

Appendix 1: Microcredit Institutions whose figures on poorest* and total clients as of December 31, 2003 have been verified

This is the fifth year in which the Microcredit Summit has attempted to verify the data reported by its largest members. Practitioner institutions that submitted a 2004 Institutional Action Plan reporting more than 2,500 clients were asked to provide the Campaign with the names of donor agencies, research institutions, networks or other institutions that could corroborate their data. In the letter addressed to the potential verifiers, the Secretariat defined the process as follows: "By confirm, we mean that you have visited the program, met the senior officials, reviewed aspects of the operation, they have provided you with numbers, and you believe that the institution and the numbers listed below are reliable and credible. While we understand that no one can provide absolute certainty, we would appreciate your participation in this process."

As in years gone by, the Summit's greatest challenge is bridging the gap between its commitment to reaching the poorest, and the lack of effective poverty measurement tools in use. Therefore, every use of the term "poorest" in these appendixes should be read within the context of this dilemma. Our work to expand awareness about and use of cost-effective poverty measurement tools is described in the text of the report.

The data from 286 practitioner institutions was corroborated by at least one other organization. These 286 institutions reported reaching 47.5 million poorest at the end of 2003, or 87 percent of the total number of poorest clients reported. 39.7 million, or 84 percent, of the 47.5 million poorest clients verified are women.

* "Poorest" in developing countries refers to families whose income is in the bottom 50 percent of all those living below their country's poverty line, or any of the 1.2 billion who live on less than $1 a day adjusted for purchasing power parity (PPP), when they started with the program.
